1. Pyschometric:

It is the field of study concerned with the theory and technique of psychological measurement, which includes the measurement of knowledge, abilities, attitudes, and personality traits. It involves the development and application of standardized tests and techniques to measure these variables.

(a) Aptitude:

Aptitude measures the degree to which individuals “like” activities of various kinds. There are six broadinterest scales - Realistic, Investigative, Artistic, Social, Enterprising and Conventional. Each of these scales has been split into specific sub-scales which will help you arrive at suitable career options.

The aptitude report indicates our passion and likelihood of enjoying the kind of activities described in the respective domain. When we do things we like, we tend to invest greater effort and time in mastering it. When our professions are chosen based on our likes, we tend to feel happy and satisfied, rather than disinterested and stressed. Therefore, at Career Gati, we consider “interests” to be crucial for making career decisions!

It is important to remember that presence of high interest in something may not necessarily mean thatyou have an ability or skill in that area.

(b) Intelligence:

Developmental psychologists developed this internationally acclaimed test. According to this, people have different kinds of intelligences, and it is fairer than IQ tests, which only measure one type of aptitude.

The theory of intelligence suggests that people learn in different ways and that the brain is responsive to different types of content. The theory identifies Eight different potential pathways to learning, or intelligences, which are interconnected and can work independently:

1. Interpersonal
2. Intrapersonal
3. Musical
4. Logical/Mathematical
5. Body/Kinesthetic
6. Verbal/Linguistic
7. Visual/Spatial
8. Naturalistic.

2. Education:

Education is the process of facilitating learning, or the acquisition of knowledge, skills, values, beliefs, and habits. Your past performance in various subjects will help determine your proficiency in those areas and will be used for your career recommendations.

3. Astrology:

Astrology is an ancient practice that looks at the positions of celestial bodies to understand and predict aspects of a person's life, such as their personality, relationships, and future. It's based on the belief that the positions of stars and planets can influence our lives in meaningful ways, providing guidance and insight into various aspects of life.

(a) Vedic:

Vedic astrology, also known as Jyotish, is an ancient Indian system of astrology that is based on the belief that celestial movements and positions can influence human affairs and natural phenomena. It incorporates elements of astronomy and mathematics to interpret the influence of the stars and planets on individuals' lives, guiding them in making decisions and understanding their destiny.

(b) Numerology:

Numerology is a practice that suggests a mystical connection between numbers and events in life. It is based on the idea that numbers have unique vibrations and significance, influencing personality, relationships, and life paths. It is followed by those who believe in its principles, particularly in Hindu culture, as a means of understanding themselves and their futures.

4. Family & Society:

Family and society guidance in career counseling involves considering the familial and societal influences on an individual's career choices. It entails providing personalized advice and direction that aligns with the student's family background, cultural values, and societal expectations. By understanding these influences, individuals can make informed decisions that resonate with their familial and social contexts.

Career Recommendations:

The career recommendations given in this report are based on your all types of interests, education and personal profile. This is a highly customized report and care should be taken to understand the report recommendations. If there are any queries, please write back to us. The career recommendations are based on the market scenario and your profile.

1.2 Intelligence Analysis:

Developmental psychologists developed this internationally acclaimed test. According to this, people have different kinds of intelligences, and it is fairer than IQ tests, which only measure one type of aptitude. There are many types of intelligence, and that these intelligences are relatively independent faculties. Multiple intelligence theory suggests that having a high ability level in one area does not necessarily predict similar abilities in others. Some may see this theory as a common-sense approach to intelligence assessment, as intelligence is multifaceted and characterized by individual differences in abilities and talents across various domains.

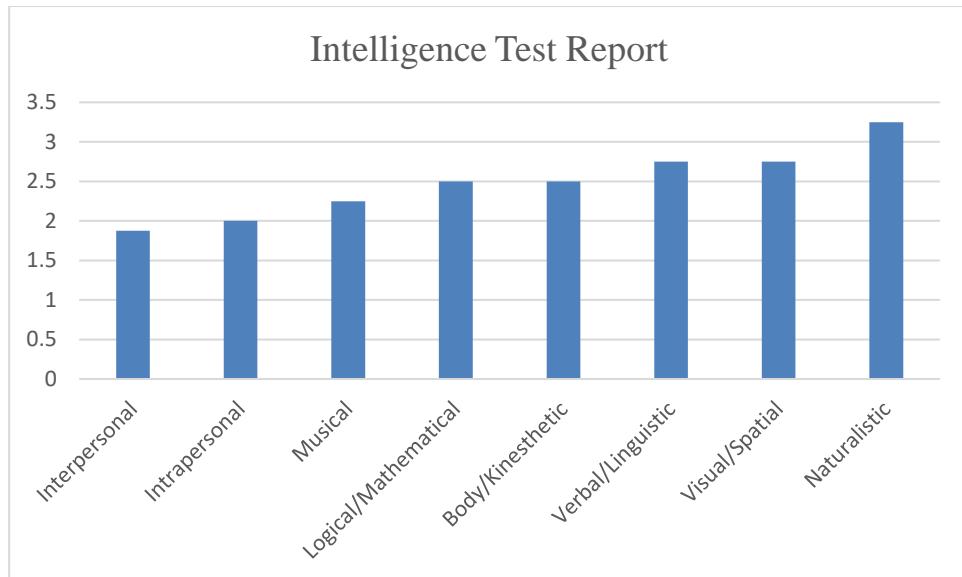

For example, young people often notice that they find certain subjects in school relatively easy compared to other subjects, or that they find academics challenging but excel in other domains, such as sports or creative pursuits. Gardner suggests that struggling in certain areas doesn't mean you're unintelligent—it can indicate a unique learning style or aptitude for a different type of intelligence.

The theory of intelligence suggests that people learn in different ways and that the brain is responsive to different types of content. The theory identifies Eight different potential pathways to learning, or intelligences, which are interconnected and can work independently:

1. Interpersonal
2. Intrapersonal
3. Musical
4. Logical/Mathematical
5. Body/Kinesthetic
6. Verbal/Linguistic
7. Visual/Spatial
8. Naturalistic.

Your scores on multiple intelligences are presented below.

From this analysis, top 3 intelligence types are picked to suggest right careers for you. Your primary intelligence is in Interpersonal area followed by Intrapersonal and Musical.

1. Interpersonal Intelligence (People Smart)

Interpersonal intelligence also plays a vital function in a person's sense of well-being. It promotes success in managing relationships with other people. Its two central skills, the ability to notice and make distinctions among other individuals and the ability to recognize the emotions, moods, perspectives, and motivations of people, are known to be critical factors in successful employment. The ability to manage groups of people is required for managerial or leadership positions. Good teachers, counselors, salespersons, and psychologists need to understand a specific individual and then be adept at managing that relationship.

Capacities to discern and respond appropriately to the moods, temperaments, motivations, and desires of other people.

END STATES: Therapist, Salesman

If you're good at persuading and leading, then you are employing your keen interpersonal intelligence, also known as social intelligence. You're probably curious about others, enjoy conversation, and are exceedingly empathetic. If you are one of these "people-smart" individuals, then your calling may be in sales, teaching, management, or politics.

Daniel Golemans work on social intelligence has made a huge impact on helping people grow their ability to understand and interact effectively with others. Social intelligence involves effective verbal and nonverbal communication, the ability to note distinctions among others, and sensitivity to the moods and temperaments of others.

Possible jobs include:

- Diplomat
- Leader
- Manager
- Politician
- Clergy
- Social Worker
- Receptionist
- Sales Representative
- Counselor
- Child Care
- Coach
- Teachers
- HR managers
- Sales and Marketing
- Administration
- Businessmen

2. Intrapersonal Intelligence (Self-Smart)

Intrapersonal: Self-knowledge and the ability to act adaptively on the basis of that knowledge. This intelligence includes having an accurate picture of oneself (one's strengths and limitations); awareness of inner moods, intentions, motivations, temperaments, and desires; and the capacity for self-discipline, self-understanding, and self-esteem.

Access to one's own feelings and the ability to discriminate among them and draw upon them to guide behavior; knowledge of one's own strengths, weaknesses, desires, and intelligences.

END STATES: Person with detailed accurate self-knowledge

Unique contributions of the MI model to intelligence theory are the personal intelligences. The Intrapersonal and Interpersonal intelligences are presented as separate yet related functions of the human brain (especially the frontal lobes). Intrapersonal ability emphasizes self-knowledge, and interpersonal involves understanding other people.

People with strong interpersonal intelligence are skilled at understanding and interacting with others, making them well-suited for careers in teaching, counselling, or leadership roles.

Intrapersonal intelligence involves a deep understanding of your own thoughts, emotions, and aspirations. Do you already know which of Gardner's intelligences are your strengths? If you know yourself well, then you have high levels of intrapersonal or emotional intelligence (EQ). You relate well to others and can excel in fields like psychology, social work, or career counseling.

Intrapersonal intelligence involves self-awareness and understanding one's own emotions, strengths, and weaknesses, which can influence career choices that align with personal values and aspirations.

Vital functions of Intrapersonal intelligence include accurate self-appraisal, goal setting, self-monitoring/correction, and emotional self-management. Results of research have highlighted the importance of metacognition for learning in the basic academic skills of reading and mathematics. Intrapersonal intelligence is not the same as self-esteem, but it may be a strong factor in promoting self-confidence and effective stress management. Well-developed Intrapersonal intelligence may well be essential to an individual's sense of satisfaction and success. Intrapersonal intelligence has been referred to as the "royal road to achievement, learning, and personal satisfaction" and is thus key in maximizing career success. Specific vocations that require skills in intrapersonal self-management include pilots, police officers, writers, counselors, and teachers.

Intrapersonal intelligence is the capacity to understand oneself and ones thoughts and feelings, and to use such knowledge in planning and directing ones life. Self-awareness is important for everyone but some people have a natural connection to emotions and the inner-experience.

Possible jobs include:

- Psychologist
- Philosopher
- Writer
- Theologian
- Career counselor
- Consultant
- Criminologist
- Energy healer
- Personal counselor
- Program planner
- Researchers
- Scientists

3. Musical Intelligence (Music Smart)

Musical intelligence includes sensitivity to pitch, rhythm, timbre, and the emotional aspects of sound, as pertaining to the functional areas of musical appreciation, singing, and playing an instrument. A composer requires significant skill in many aspects of this intelligence, especially involving creative musical thinking. Some musical careers (e.g., instrumentalist, vocalist) may require more circumscribed abilities that emphasize technical skill rather than creative output.

Abilities to produce and appreciate rhythm, pitch, and timbre; appreciation of the forms of musical expressiveness.

END STATES: Composer, Violinist

Those with musical intelligence have a heightened sensitivity to sound, rhythm, and pitch, and they often excel in music-related fields.

Another area of intelligence is musical-rhythmic. Have you been successful at learning an instrument? Do you effortlessly sing in tune and find the beat to your favorite songs? If so, you may dream of rock star fame, but there are other professions to consider including sound engineer, songwriter, or music teacher.

Musical intelligence is the capacity to discern pitch, rhythm, timbre, and tone. This intelligence enables us to recognize, create, reproduce, and reflect on music, as demonstrated by composers, conductors, musicians, vocalist, and sensitive listeners. Lets rock and roll!

Possible jobs include:

- Audiologist
- Choir director
- Music conductor
- Music critic
- Music publisher
- Music promoter
- Music retailer
- Music teacher

- Music therapist
- Piano tuner
- Recording engineer
- Songwriter
- Sound editor
- Speech pathologist

2. Education:

Education is the process of facilitating learning, or the acquisition of knowledge, skills, values, beliefs, and habits. Your past performance in various subjects will help determine your proficiency in those areas and will be used for your career recommendations.

Congratulations on scoring 9.12 CGPA in your latest examination. It reflects you are good in studies. Analysis of previous 3 marksheets indicates that you are good in studies and perform better in practical subjects. Especially, in behavioural sciences and research & analysis related courses. It reflects that you are good at relationship building and research related careers.

3. Family & Society:

This section of analysis is related to your family and society background. Guidance on career involves considering the familial and societal influences on an individual's career choices. It entails providing personalized advice and direction that aligns with the student's family background, cultural values, and societal expectations. By understanding these influences, individuals can make informed decisions that resonate with their familial and social contexts.

The results of your test are as shown below:

Question	Answer	Rating
I like to be alone most of the times	Agree	2
I am a family person	Strongly agree	1
I am very much attached to my family members and can not live far from them.	Agree	2
My father is my ideal and I want to be like him	Strongly Disagree	5
I think I can do better with my career than what my father did with his career	Strongly agree	1
I want to travel places and meet different people in my life	Strongly agree	1
Working/living in a foreign country is my dream	Strongly Disagree	5
If I have to choose between family and my career, I will choose career	Neutral	3
I want to be my own boss rather than work for others	Strongly agree	1
I prefer learning by being an employee rather than start my own business	Disagree	4
If my parents or family members are sick or they need me, I will give priority to them and not my career	Strongly agree	1
I believe that I can make my career and no one else	Neutral	3

I want to spend my evenings with my family instead of working in office during that time	Disagree	4
I like to spend time in front of laptop/mobile/TV rather than meeting people.	Strongly	5
	Disagree
I believe that I will get what is in my fate	Strongly agree	1

The analysis of your responses indicate that you are not a 100% family-oriented person but at the same time you will stand with your family in need. There seems to be some confusion with you about whether you are a Loner or not. You need more self-confidence to shape up your career. It seems that a start-up business related to counselling, teaching or a government administrative job will suit you better.

4. Astrology:

In this section there will be two parts of analysis- first, Vedic astrology based on the positions of celestial bodies to understand and predict your career aspects including personality, relationships, and future. It's based on the belief that the positions of stars and planets can influence our lives in meaningful ways, providing guidance and insight into various aspects of life. Second, there will be Numerology.

4.1 Vedic:

Vedic astrology, also known as Jyotish, is an ancient Indian system of astrology that is based on the belief that celestial movements and positions can influence human affairs and natural phenomena. It incorporates elements of astronomy and mathematics to interpret the influence of the stars and planets on individuals' lives, guiding them in making decisions and understanding their destiny.

The career insights from your long Vedic astrology report is that you will be more successful in career that involves travelling to different places, involved in writing, research and speaking. Suggested career options are Creative writer, Teacher, Social Media writer/ blogger, Advertising manager.

The detailed report is there in the appendix if you wish to go through it.

4.2 Numerology:

Numerology is quite well known science and made more popular by Bollywood in India. Choosing names of a movie or of actors, releasing films on a particular date and many such decisions use numerology. Complete reliance is a bad practice and we suggest that one should look for comprehensive insights arising out of all various tools used by our researchers.

There are many types of numerology analysis and after years of research, we have found that following analysis is most effective in predicting career options.

Your Birth date: 15th May 1999
